

2m students resit medical exam after alleged leak

More than 2 million aspiring doctors sat one of the world's toughest entrance exams for a second time after an alleged question paper leak forced authorities to scrap the original test results.

Students arriving at test centres last Sunday were greeted by airport-style security. They were frisked, scanned and made to pass through metal detectors while police and paramilitary personnel stood guard outside.

The test is the gateway to India's medical colleges, where only about 5-6% of candidates secure a coveted seat.
